Strike, Spare or Gutter Ball

Upland Youngsters Bowl 'em Over

Jaime Ceron stared at the bowling pins. If he concentrated and took his time, he would surely get a strike.

But, alas, the ball hit the floor with a thud, rolled down the alley and curved into the gutter.

"Today is just not my day," the 10-year-old said with a smile. "But I'm really pretty good. I've even made a few strikes before."

His brother, Dan Casner, shook his head in disbelief.

"You aren't that good," Casner said. "Your average is only 40."

The brothers, along with about 30 other Upland youngsters, are learning to bowl at the Upland Bowl.

Every Wednesday afternoon these amateur bowlers learn how to pick up a ball, roll it down the alley and receive a grade on their ability.

George Sanders, who has been bowling for about 21 years, is their instructor.

"This group is very competitive," he said. "They are learning to bowl really well."

But the 37-year-old bowler is not surprised. He believes any child is capable of becoming a skillful bowler.

"The game is not difficult," Sanders said. "It only becomes that way if the student makes it hard."

The class, which is sponsored by the Upland Recreation Department, lasts ten weeks and meets for an hour-and-a-half every Wednesday. Students must be 6- to 12-years-old.

"The first four weeks are spent looking at films," Sanders said. "Then I bring them out to the lanes. Most of the kids who take this class have had no previous knowledge of bowling."

During that time students learn how to keep their balance and to walk straight while holding a bowling ball.

"It has to be a nice, smooth action," Sanders said.

For the last six weeks of the course, the class is split up into teams that play against one another. The team that comes out on top will get a chance to play against the first-place Rancho Cucamonga team.

The competition is fierce.

As part of "The Team," Mike Odum, Mick Palmer and Robert Lansford consider themselves the top bowlers of the class.

"We're in first place and plan to stay that way," Odum said.

But last-place team, the Lasers, hope to challenge that position.

"I predict we will end up on top," said Trent Kaufman, of the Lasers. "But it's a bummer that we are in last place right now."

Besides the competition, the students believe bowling is a fun game.

"I like coming here because it gives me something to do," Odum said. "You usually go home after school and just sit and watch television. There is nothing on. At least bowling is good exercise."

For Jaime and Janet Graves, taking up bowling was a matter of upholding family tradition.

"Our grandmother wanted us to," Janet Graves said. "She's a bowler. Besides, it's fun."

Her twin sister agreed.

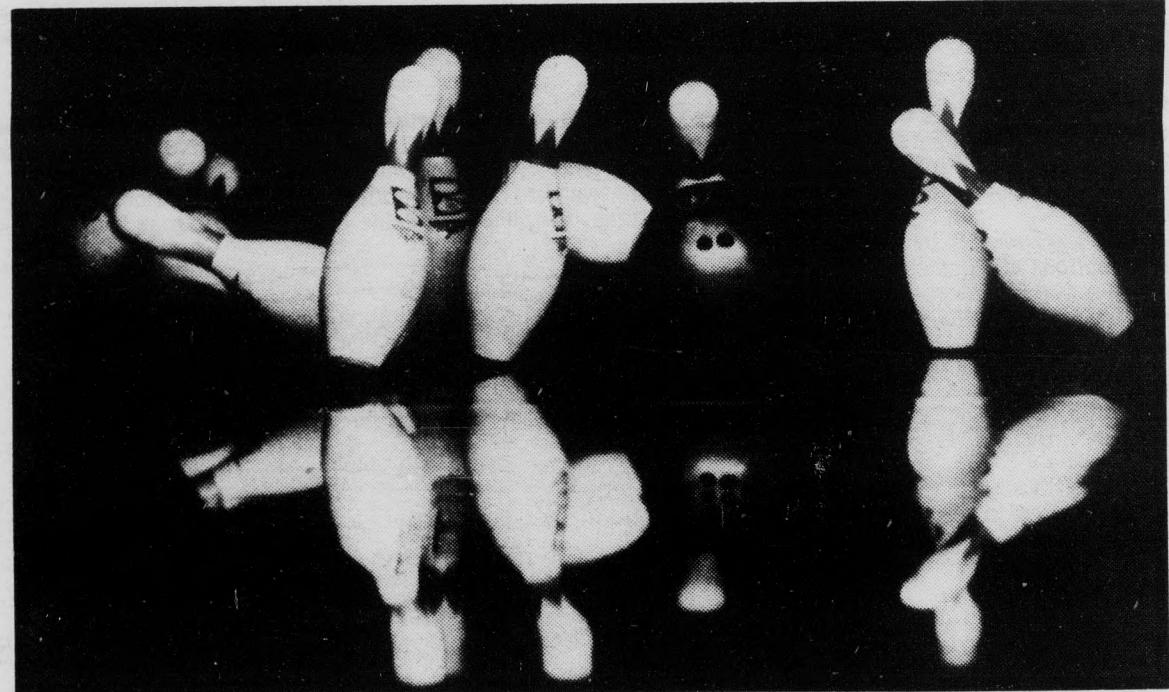

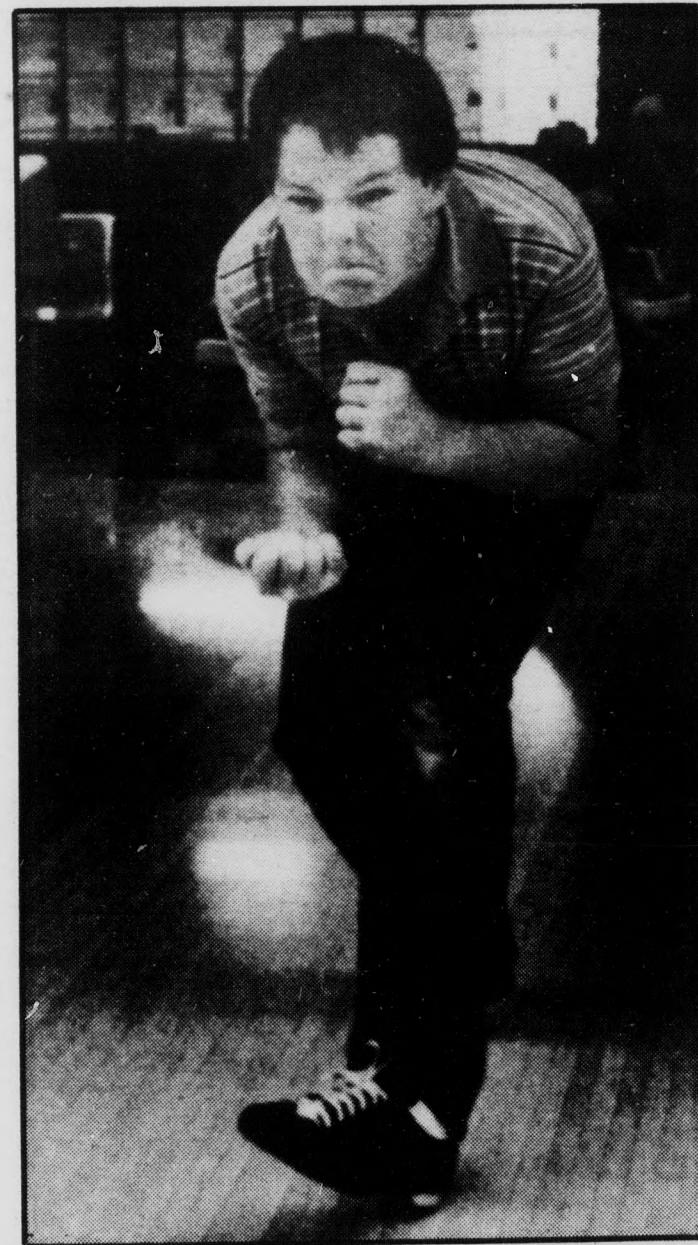

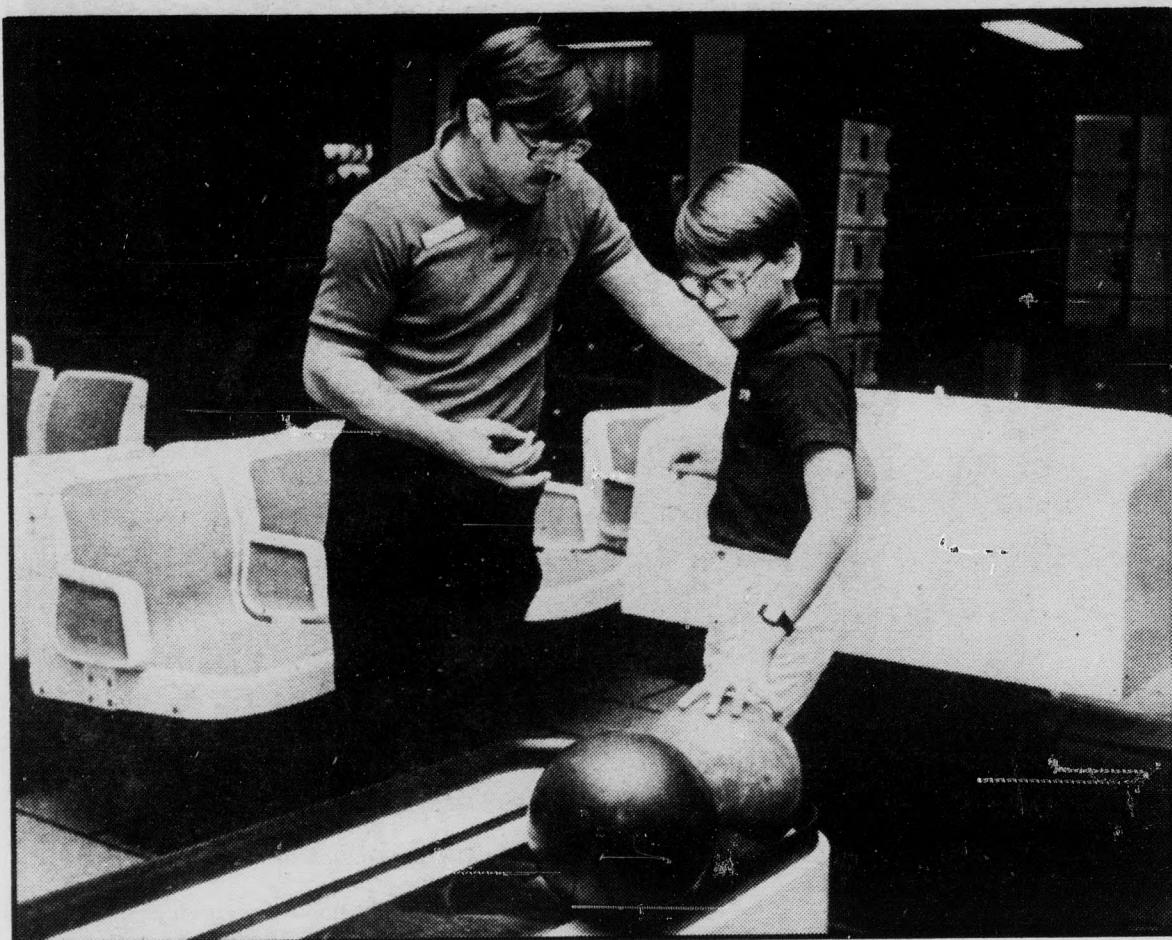

"I've learned a lot," Jaime Graves said.

Parents also look at bowling in a positive light.

"I think it's better than watching television all the time," said Mary Ann Petersen. "I enjoy the fact that they play with other kids. It's good because it keeps them busy."

Petersen's two sons, Scott and Jeff, belong to the bowling class.

"You know, the funniest thing is that Jeff is more athletic, but Scott tends to be the better player," Petersen said. □

Portable library rolls into Victoria on regular basis

By Marianne Aiken

It was a warm, sunny afternoon when the San Bernardino County bookmobile rolled into the parking lot of Windrows Park in the Victoria Planned Community in Etiwanda.

The hum of the converted motorhome's idling engine combined with the warmth of Santa Ana winds to create a relaxing environment for picking out a good book last Wednesday.

That's just what Margi Goldstein and her 4 1/2-year-old son Chad had on their minds.

A love of reading brought Goldstein to the bookmobile, she said.

"I love libraries," she said as she perused the adult fiction section. "This is really convenient for me because my children can't run around like they can in the other library."

Driver Michael Fouch and library assistant Jeanne Russell checked out Chad's books with the vehicle's portable computer and asked him if he wanted a bag.

An electronic record of all the books checked out from the bookmobile is stored in the county library system's main computer at the end of every day.

The bookmobile stops in Windrows Park every other Wednesday from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. It is scheduled to visit on Nov. 26 and Dec. 10. Dec. 24 is a holiday.

It's not just for kids. Its collection includes about 3,000 volumes of hardcover and paperback books, plus films, recordings, cassettes, periodicals and art prints.

"We had one little girl try to count them all, but she never got through it," said Fouch, who has been driving the bookmobile for more than 15 years.

Chaffey College reaps $270,000 due to measure

By Marianne Aiken

Chaffey College will get about $270,000 because of a successful $400 million state bond election earlier this month, officials said.

Proposition 56, the Higher Education Facilities Bond Act, provides money for construction or improvement of facilities at the University of California's nine campuses, the California State University's 19 campuses, and the 106 California Community College campuses.

Terry Spears, Chaffey College's vice president for business, said he expects the college will start receiving money from the sale of bonds next spring.

"It's actually nothing more than a substitute mechanism for tideland oil resources which we've been receiving for many years," Spears said. The royalties paid to the state from oil and gas extracted on state lands have declined with the unexpected drop in oil prices.

"It's not a big deal anymore," Spears said of the oil revenue.

Primary and secondary education will now receive the tideland oil royalty funds as part of a school construction package associated with another successful school bond issue on the ballot, Proposition 53. The Greene-Hughes School Building Lease-Purchase Bond provided for an $800 million bond issue and kicked into place new legislation placing a ceiling on the fees school districts can charge developers to offset the cost of building new schools.

The passage of the two state bond issues indicates Californians are looking at education in a more positive light, said Mike Alexander, Chaffey College's vice president for instruction.

"That says we've changed our minds about schools, we want to support them," Alexander said. "If those (propositions) had been on the ballot five years ago, they never would have passed just because they had the word 'school' in them."

Alexander and Spears said the college is still waiting for guidelines from the California Community College chancellor's office to tell them what they can spend the money on.

Upland workers can back out

By Kimberly Heinrichs

The 28 Upland city employees who signed contracts protecting themselves from Proposition 61's effects will have a chance to back out now that the initiative has failed.

The proposition, written by tax crusader Paul Gann, would have capped public salaries.

"Our expectation is that the majority of people who made those contracts will have them ... destroyed isn't the word, but it's close," City Manager Lee Travers said. "On the request of the employees, we'll tear it up."

Had the initiative passed, those earning more than about $60,000 would have had their salaries capped. Travers said the contracts offered those earning $64,000 or more, including benefits, insurance that their salaries would not be reduced.

The city would have employed the workers at their current salaries for five years with an annual minimum increase of 25 percent of the Consumer Price Index for the Los Angeles-Long Beach area, Travers said.

However, now that the proposition has failed, it is more beneficial for the employees to resume the meet-and-confer process of the past, he said.

City panels' relations should improve

By Mike Krapfl

The November election can only improve relations between Rancho Cucamonga's Planning Commission and City Council, several planning commissioners agreed last week.

In the past, several City Council decisions to overrule the Planning Commission had caused some commissioners to grumble quietly outside council chambers.

The election of their own chairman, Dennis Stout, to the mayor's post should change that, commissioners agreed.

David Barker, who replaced Stout as the commission's chairman at last week's meeting, said he hoped Stout's election would untie the sometimes knotted lines of communication between the City Council and the Planning Commission.

Barker said, "I think communication between the two groups could be improved and that's why I supported Dennis Stout for mayor."

The importance of improved communication "is the Planning Commission's need for direction," Barker said. "Otherwise we go ahead and make decisions that the council may overturn — as is their right — at a later date."

Several decisions to overturn commission recommendations at a previous City Council meeting caused Planning Commissioner Larry McNeil to tell several colleagues he was "frustrated."

Although he laughed while he said it, McNeil did lament, "All that work of ours being overturned boom, boom and boom."

A solution to the problem, McNeil said, might be a "regular meeting of the minds so we can eradicate any discomfort that might inevitably occur between the two groups."

McNeil said he thought Stout, because of his experience as a commissioner, would support the idea.

When asked what he thought of commission-council communication, Stout said last week, "I know there will be better communication between the two groups (when I become mayor). I want to make that a priority."

"I'm not saying the commission has ever been at odds with the council," Stout said.

Peter Tolstoy, who replaced Herman Rempel on the commission this fall when Rempel ran for mayor, said, "I'm not sure relations between the two bodies have been bad, but I am looking forward to good relations when Dennis becomes mayor."

Although commission-council relations are a concern, Barker said his first priority as commission chairman is the group's continuity. Barker, McNeil and Tolstoy are all serving on expired terms.

west as the Chino Hills and as far east as Forest Falls.

Fouch said the bookmobile's sphere has expanded to include a continuously evolving series of stops since the service started in 1959.

"It's impossible to do all the stops you want to," Russell said. "You keep the ones that are active."

The bookmobile spends from 30 minutes to an hour at each stop, dispensing books for children and adults to check out for two-week renewable periods.

"It's a regular collection that you'd have in a normal library, but it's smaller," Fouch said.

The bookmobile is "on the road" four days a week, then spends half a day at the branch library in Highland filling requests.

"We'll take requests for subjects and bring them out the next time we come," Russell said.

Fouch and Russell started stopping in Victoria when they noticed all the construction going on there.

The Victoria stop is becoming more active, Russell said.

"It took off quickly. People noticed it right away."

Typically, six families visit every hour the vehicle is in Victoria.

"Individual children have been stopping by after school, which we like," Russell said.

The county has two other bookmobiles. □

Long-awaited repairs come to Upland center

By Kimberly Heinrichs

It's been a long year and a half but Upland's Community Center is finally getting a facelift.

Recreation Director Larry Thornburg said that various obstacles have held up work on the center at 352 C. St., but he said the end — and a new beginning — is in sight.

The former supermarket, which houses the city's senior citizen and gymnastics programs, was purchased eight years ago, he said.

In April 1985 the City Council allocated $105,000 of its Community Development Block Grant Funds to the center for a new heating and air conditioning system and refurbishing of the building. As was necessary, the county approved the council's choice for the federal funds.

Then the trouble began.

"The big hang-up on the project has been that a major portion of the project involved major renovation of the upstairs, getting decisions as to what handicapped requirements would be there," Thornburg said.

The county decided to let the city decide, so the city went to the state for its interpretation of handicap requirements, he explained.

At first it was thought that since the Recreation Department wanted to move the pool tables upstairs so the other visitors could have more peace and quiet, an elevator would be needed for physically disabled pool players.

That elevator would have cost the city an additional $35,000, which would have meant an end to the project, he said.

Finally, a compromise was reached: one pool table would remain downstairs, Thornburg said.

See SENIORS/Page 9

Upland to get grant to aid in finishing Magnolia Park

The city of Upland will receive $152,000 in federal grant funds to help complete its Magnolia Park, Recreation Director Larry Thornburg said.

The money comes from the bond act passed in June, the Community Parklands Act, which granted park funds to cities based on population.

Upland decided to spend its portion on completion of an additional 1 1/2 acres for the park on 15th Street. The funds will be available July 1, but the director said a landscape architect already has been hired to draw up plans.

The firm, Elliot/Maloney of Riverside, was hired in April for $16,000 to design a master plan and working drawings for the park, he said.

The federal funds will supplement the park's completion, but Thornburg said his department will have to ask the City Council for an additional $150,000 to $200,000 to complete it.

Church historian criticizes mix of politics, religion advance a particular foreign policy perspective."

He lamented the spreading "unholy alliance developing in the Protestant world marrying a social and political agenda with religious rhetoric. Putting political pronouncements on a par with theological statements has all the possibilities of tragedy for the church. He who marries the spirit of the times will soon find himself a widower."

The institute, whose 11-member staff operates on an annual budget of about $500,000, is not expected to abandon its essentially conservative convictions, although Hill said he will seek to distance the group from the extremists of the religious right.

"Truth is no respecter of political spectrums," he said, adding that he hoped to serve as "an honest broker" between the ideological flanks of American Christianity.

He asserted, however, that there is "not always equal truth on all sides," and derided those who instinctively "sanctify the middle as the holy ground."

Hill noted that his group has engaged in wide-ranging and productive discussions recently with Washington's Episcopal Bishop John Walker, who is regarded as politically progressive.

He also said he is exploring regular contacts and discussions with the editors of the Chicago-based ecumenical journal The Christian Century, which serves as a voice for liberal Protestantism and ecumenical Christianity.

Good and bad of area's growth targeted

By Andrew Horan

A local chapter of the Sierra Club is poised to question whether bigger is better in the Inland Empire.

The San Gorgonio chapter in San Bernardino is one of only four groups nationwide to earn a $4,000 grant from the national Sierra Club in San Francisco to study the effects of population growth on the environment.

"This (the Inland Empire) is one of the fastest growing areas in the state, and the impact on the environment is striking," said Bill Havert, San Gorgonio chapter conservation coordinator.

Riverside and San Bernardino counties are the second- and third-fastest growing of California's 58 counties, according to a study earlier this year by the state Department of Finance.

Havert said his group will hire a part-time researcher in January to study the effects of 40 years of growth in the Southland and see what lessons planners in both counties can learn.

"The idea is to look at (growth), analyze the impact, see what's been lost, what problems have been created and then develop policy recommendations" for the western halves of both counties, Havert said.

The studies also will be used to heighten public awareness of the costs associated with growth, according to Eric Wilson, an administrative assistant in the conservation department of the national Sierra Club.

"This is a way of bringing the question of unlimited population growth more fully to people's attention," Wilson said.

"Unlimited growth has costs that come with it," Wilson said, "and we have a tendency not to look at them.

"Sometimes bigger is not better," he added.

Wilson said the studies are related to the Sierra Club's long-standing position on national

"It is our belief that in this and world population growth.

"In the long run, this country and the world need to attain a position of population stability for the safety of the natural environment — upon which all life depends," he said.

"It is our belief that in this very fundamental aspect of the natural world, we must take (action) to protect natural lands and endangered species," Wilson added.

"Those issues will never reach full resolution if we keep increasing the population and the burden on the environment."

The local chapter will have one year to study how growth affects housing density, transportation patterns, open space and endangered wildlife species, according to Wilson.

Admissions tax injunction falls to speed up suit

By Mike Krapfl

To expedite its court challenge of Rancho Cucamonga's admissions tax, Edwards Cinema will not ask a judge for an injunction stopping the city from collecting the tax, Edwards' attorney said recently.

Barry London and the city's attorneys were scheduled to argue the case in West Valley Superior Court several weeks ago.

The two sides, however, have agreed to let the 10 percent tax stand until a judge hears Edwards' lawsuit. Bypassing an injunction will allow the case to go to court early next year, London said.

Speaking from his San Francisco office, London said Edwards is challenging Rancho Cucamonga's tax on the same grounds used by three other companies last month to challenge a similar tax in Montclair.

London and the companies claim the tax is an unconstitutional breach of their First Amendment rights to free speech.

Although other businesses are affected by the tax — any business selling an admission ticket or imposing a cover charge must collect the tax which is borne primarily by theaters, London said.

That, London said, is what makes the tax unconstitutional.

"Because theaters are paying most of the tax how can courts make sure the following conversation doesn't take place," London said.

"A city official tells a theater owner, 'We don't like this movie you're showing, it's too sexy. By the way, let's talk about your admissions tax rate for the coming year.'"

Although London has successfully overturned an admissions tax in Pleasant Hill using that argument, Rancho Cucamonga City Manager Lauren Wasserman said he doesn't think London can do the same to his city's tax.

"When we adopted the ordinance three years ago, we were very careful to make certain it didn't discriminate against theaters," Wasserman said.

When the ordinance was adopted in April 1983, there were no theaters in Rancho Cucamonga nor were there plans for any theaters in the city.

Wasserman denied London's charge the tax could be used to censor the content of films. "We don't feel the admissions tax is related to the First Amendment," he said.

"We would never consider using it to tell people what they can or can't show," Wasserman said.

R.C. man restores Etiwanda's oldest, history-rich house

By Mike Krapfl

Veterans Day was no holiday for Jim Clark.

The former Navy sailor stood atop his ladder that day and worked to restore a home built by another sailor, Capt. Joseph S. Garcia.

Garcia started building the home — Etiwanda's oldest — in 1874. Clark, with a little help from other volunteers, has been rebuilding the Chaffey-Garcia House since early 1985 and has a lot of work left to do.

While taking a short break, he stepped through the home's gutted interior and climbed to an attic window facing the skeletons of new homes springing up in the Victoria planned community.

"No, it isn't frustrating to see the progress over there," he said while watching the houses going up.

"Granted," Clark continued, "if you looked at this old house and all the work that still needs to be done to restore it, you'd throw up your hands and walk away. But if you only worry about what you're doing at the moment, it's relaxing."

Clark, who retired from his job as the director of facilities for the Chaffey Joint Union High School District in 1974, was relaxing by worrying about painting the roof.

When asked why he worried about the old house enough to devote 35 to 40 hours a week to its restoration, Clark tipped back his blue golf hat and said, "I like doing this sort of thing."

"Besides," he said, "I feel everybody should contribute something to the community they live in. That could be done in many ways: membership in a service club, donations, military service or restoring an old house."

The restoration project is being sponsored by the Etiwanda Historical Society and funded and staffed by donors and volunteers.

Although he insists on spreading credit for the project, Clark said he's dedicated to seeing it through "because I've got a family interest and heritage here."

Five generations of his family have grown up in Etiwanda, he explained. Those generations include his wife's great-grandmother, who was photographed rocking on the Garcia House's porch in 1894.

"I think it's important that we're working to save some of that heritage," Clark said.

RANCHO CUCAMONGA'S Reelin' and a Rollin'

Rancho Cucamonga residents can finally see a movie in their own town.

"It's about time," Art Lungi said as he walked out of his second viewing of "Crocodile Dundee."

"It (seeing a movie in Rancho Cucamonga) is certainly a lot better than driving into San Bernardino to see a show," Lungi said. "Staying in Rancho is not bad at all."

Lungi was speaking under the bright lights of the newly opened Edwards Cinemas on Haven Avenue. The six-screen complex opened Oct. 10.

"But," Winston Evans, the theater's manager said, "a lot of people still don't know we've opened yet."

And open it is. Driving up Haven from the San Bernardino Freeway, the theater's bright, almost gaudy lights are impossible to miss.

"Yet people seem to," Evans said. "A theater in Montclair, for example, can play the same show we do and they'll have a crowd of 20,000 while we'll have 6,000."

Despite the Montclair competition, Evans said he's confident more and more people will drive to Rancho Cucamonga to see a movie. The theater, he explained, is as big an attraction as the films shown inside.

"An attorney who lives close to the Montclair theaters said he'd rather drive out here to see a movie," Evans said. "The gentleman said he's from New York and said the theater reminds him of an old movie house. It's not just a sterile theater."

The theater is a combination of Spanish and art-deco design. The exterior mirrors the neighboring Virginia Dare Winery Business Center — until the lights are turned on. Once glittering, it is an appropriate showcase for Hollywood's product.

To project that product, the theater has what First Assistant Manager Thomas Stephens calls "a state of the art, three-platter projection system."

Besides showing films, the system's 13 wheels, pulleys and rollers transfer a film's length from one platter to another. All so the film doesn't have to be rewound.

"So," Stephens said, "one man can operate all six of the projectors at once with no problem."

"The only hard part is learning to loop it

(the film) through the projector," he said. "But once you learn that, all it takes (to show a film) is the push of a button."

That button, appropriately enough, is labeled "Start."

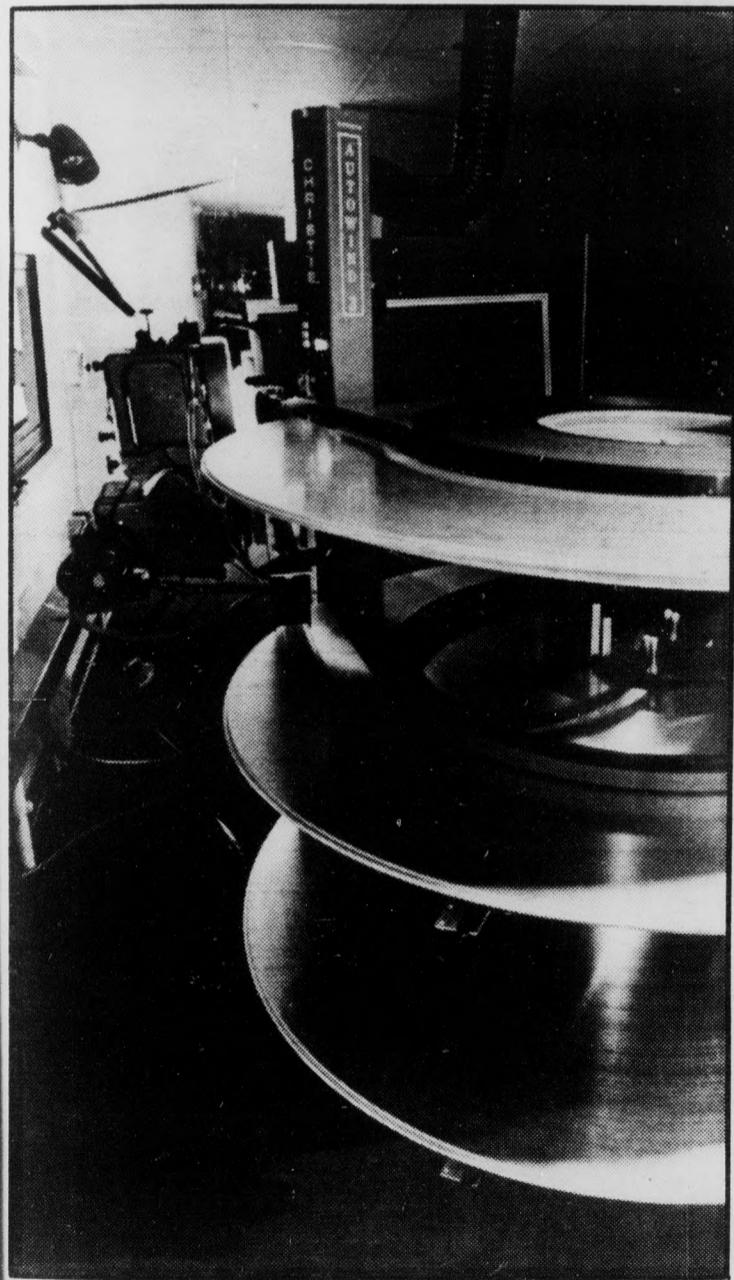

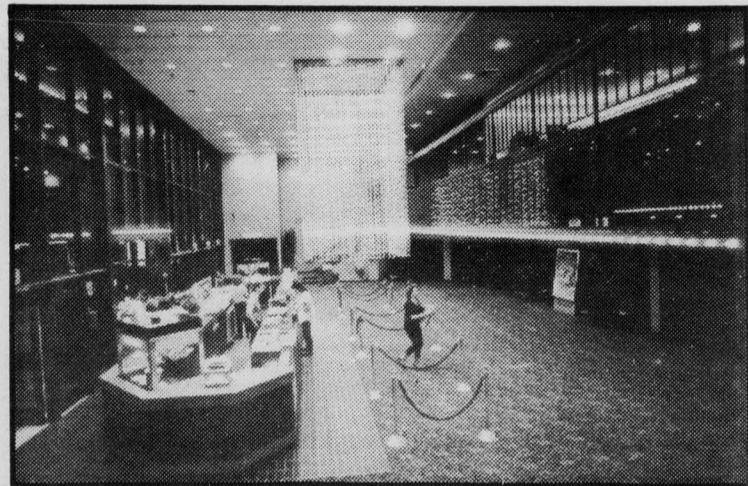

Before that button is pushed though, tickets have to be sold. David Capocci, a cashier at the theater, said during a recent shift that "I can't even guess how many I've sold tonight."

"Which is one of our biggest problems," Evans said. "Because of the city's (10 percent admissions) tax we can't use a computer to sell tickets and have to tear them off by hand."

Evans, who has nothing good to say about the city's tax (which raises ticket prices 50 cents), said that's his biggest headache. "Otherwise I think we've built ourselves a heck of a theater."

Grant Vermillion, a 15-year-old from Upland, agreed. "It's real nice in there," he said after leaving a showing of "Crocodile Dundee."

"The seats," he said, "are even comfortable."

The lights glitter inside and outside of the newly opened Edwards Cinemas (far left) on Rancho Cucamonga's Haven Avenue.

Upstairs, in the projection booth, Brian Wells (above left and right) threads a film through one of the theater's six, $50,000 projection units. The projector uses three platters and 13 wheels and pulleys to rewind the film at the same time it's being shown.

New government freeway agency proposed

Entity would plan, provide funds for expansion of Foothill Freeway

By Patrick McGreevy

A new government agency has been proposed to coordinate planning and acquire and spend local funds for the Foothill Freeway construction.

The 28-mile extension of the freeway east of La Verne to San Bernardino through the West Valley has been stalled for years by lack of state funding.

A new joint powers agency (JPA) has been proposed by Richard Barrett, chief highway engineer for the Automobile Club of Southern California and an active participant in an existing freeway-planning group.

The proposal received preliminary support last week from city officials in Upland and Rancho Cucamonga.

"Given the present funding shortages and Caltrans' (California Department of Transportation) inability to accomplish its responsibilities, an independent, single-purpose agency should be created to move Route 30 forward," Barrett wrote in a position paper distributed to officials of cities along the route.

"The agency would plan and implement land-use changes along the freeway corridor and have the ability to collect revenues for the local share of the freeway design, right-of-way purchases and construction," Barrett wrote.

Currently, there is an informal ad hoc organization of city and county officials — the Route 30 Corridor Group — which meets to discuss the project's progress, but it has no legal authority to implement parts of the construction project.

Caltrans is the government agency with primary responsibility for planning, funding and building the freeway through Fontana, Rancho Cucamonga, Upland, Claremont and La Verne.

Barrett said there is room for a stronger local force in the process by a JPA made up of representatives of the cities and counties along the corridor.

Each city would continue to be responsible for approving development within its jurisdiction, but in accordance with an overall corridor plan developed by the JPA, Barrett envisions.

He said the JPA also would set developer fees and share in sales tax revenues generated within the area adjacent to the freeway corridor to finance the purchase of right of way and construction.

"The agency would assure the freeway is integrated into the communities and will provide funds for any additional measures if needed," Barrett wrote.

Rancho Cucamonga City Councilman Jon Mikels, chairman of the Route 30 Corridor Group, said the JPA is a good idea.

"The difference is that if a countywide gas tax is proposed, there has to be some authority to be set up to actually receive and spend the money," Mikels said.

ALJH coffers enjoy $10,000 boost

The community-sponsored fund-raiser at Alta Loma Junior High School has added almost $10,000 to the student government coffers.

About $40,000 worth of magazines and music selections were sold by seventh and eighth graders.

The funds pay for a variety of expenses, including student awards; club activities and projects; scholastic and athletic competitions and assembly programs.

Upland girl lands 'The King and I' role as princess

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Reverie Mott became a princess overnight.

The Upland girl landed the part of one of the King of Siam's many children in the San Bernardino Civic Light Opera Association's production of "The King and I."

The musical ends Saturday.

For the 9-year-old being one of 12 girls and boys chosen for the chorus is only one of the beginning steps toward her dream.

Her goal is to be a singer "most anywhere," but she especially wants to be a contestant on television's "Star Search," she said.

This is not the young performer's stage debut. As the orphan girl Mahara in a local production of "Jungle Book" in August, she sang a solo, she said.

But the youngster is not the type to get nervous about performing for an audience.

She can be shy performing for small groups, she said, but when she gets on stage in an auditorium she forgets everything but her performance, she said.

Even the hectic schedule of school, homework and nightly play practice or performance in San Bernardino is not getting to her, she said.

"It's not that hard to do the homework. It's just getting up in the morning," after going to bed at midnight that's tough, the fourth grader at St. Joseph's School said.

She has been sharing singing/dancing coach Sally Ann Bachman of Corona with her mother for more than a year now, her mother Sylvia Mott said.

Mrs. Mott, once a professional dancer, is training to get back into the entertainment field, she said.

In fact, she tied for first place in a recent children's talent contest at an Upland restaurant, Mott said. Her winning tune was the old classic, "Has Anybody Seen My Gal."

Springsteen fans frolic over live recording set

By Mike Krapfl

Bruce Springsteen's fans are legion, loyal and long-standing.

Twenty of them, in fact, exhibited those very characteristics by standing for an hour outside the doors of Rancho Cucamonga's Music Plus record store. The long stand was for the chance to be among the first to own a copy of Springsteen's new, five-record, live album.

Rich Wolken, a Bakersfield resident visiting relatives in the West Valley, said "I drove six hours to see Springsteen in concert once, I figure (this album) is worth standing in line for a few hours."

"Exactly," Lynn Sisco, Wolken's neighbor in line said.

Sisco, a 20-year-old Upland resident who proudly showed off her pink Bruce Springsteen-and-the-E-Street-Band sweatshirt, said she was standing outside the store's still-locked doors because "I have to get it (the record) when it first comes out so I can play it all day and all night."

The reason she listens to non-stop Springsteen is "the honesty in his music," she said.

Having said that, the clock struck 10, the store's doors opened, Springsteen's song

"Rosalitta" thumped from the store's stereo and Sisco picked up her copy of the $24.99 album.

Just behind Sisco, RoseAnn Burk of Rancho Cucamonga carried $174.84 worth (six copies) of "Bruce Springsteen & The E Street Band Live/1975-85" albums, tapes and compact discs.

One copy, she explained, was for herself, one for her husband, one for a gift, two for collecting and one to play in a soon-to-be-purchased compact-disk player.

Springsteen's appeal, she said, "is his ability to inspire. I'm a working person and his music inspires me a lot."

"I own my business and sometimes it gets tough," she said. Burk, the owner of Dynasty Gymnastics in Rancho Cucamonga, said Springsteen's pop music celebrations of the common man help her through tough times.

Sean Klassen, a shift manager at Upland's Licorice Pizza record store, said although he had yet to stock or sell a copy of the album, calls for it had come in. "Everybody's asking for it," he said.

As well as asking for it, everybody is buying Springsteen's music, Klassen said.

People buy Springsteen, he said, "because it seems to me like Springsteen is becoming an American folk hero," Klassen said. "How much more popular can a guy get?"

"Plenty," according to Bill Murray of Upland. Murray, pointing to the new album cover's photo of a guitar-toting Springsteen, said "Springsteen will continue to be popular as long as he sings songs people who drive beat-up Chevys can relate to."

Christmas boutique scheduled in R.C.

The VIP Club of Rancho Cucamonga will have a Christmas boutique today at the Rancho Cucamonga Center, 9791 Arrow Highway.

The boutique will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

OMSD hosts group of Japanese teachers

The Ontario-Montclair School District recently served as host for 10 Japanese educators who toured schools and spoke with students, teachers, and principals.

At Imperial Junior High School in Ontario, the Japanese educators were interviewed by the student broadcasting class. The interview was to be included in a Group W Cable newscast produced by the students. The visitors were escorted on a tour of the campus.

At Vernon Junior High School in Montclair, the guests were welcomed with a sign in Japanese and a Japanese flag displayed in the staff room where an American Indian theme potluck dinner had been prepared.

At Euclid School in Ontario, administrators discussed the process by which the school staff had planned the education program and emphasized the involvement of parents in school activities.

The Japanese educators then visited the district office where they were presented with lapel pins, information on the district and copies of the curriculum master plan.

Superintendent George Dibs greeted them in Japanese and gave them information on the school district. Dibs, who has visited Japanese schools, lead a discussion on the comparison of American and Japanese schools.

District educators joined members of the Chino Unified School District, where another contingency of Japanese educators were visiting, at a reception at the El Prado Country Club in Chino the next day.

Upland runners cap fine season

Upland High School runners starred Saturday in the CIF 3A Division cross country finals at Mt. San Antonio College.

The Highlanders' boys team ended its 1986 campaign with a third place finish in the CIF 3A finale.

Placing two runners in the top 10 and all five scoring places under 17 minutes, Upland finished with 92 points, trailing only 3A champ Arroyo (59) and runner-up Hart (85).

For Chino, the only other West Valley team represented at Saturday's CIF finals, the final finish was far less than hoped for as the Cowgirls took 10th place in the 2A girls race.

In individual competition, Ontario's Armando Huizar clocked in at 16:17 over the three-mile course, good enough for 12th place in the 2A boys finale. Meanwhile Upland's Heather Watson turned in a strong effort in the girls 3A race, with her 19:12 effort putting her eighth in the final standings.

Coach Bob Loney's Highlanders, boasting just two seniors in the top nine, got big efforts from those two upperclassmen as the Scots improved on their coach's pre-season estimations.

"David (Hesseltine) had a great race, and Pete (Burks) ran very well for a sophomore. But our two seniors had to do the job for us today. David Green had some physical problems out on the course today, so our seniors had to take up the slack."

Green, a sophomore, had turned in a 16:28 clocking at the CIF Prelims the previous Saturday to finish 14th in Upland's heat. This time seniors Pete Richardson and Scott Cleland filled the gap, finishing 29th and 39th respectively in the Highlanders' fourth and fifth place scoring spots.

Hesseltine, who had battled teammate Burks throughout the season for the number one spot on the Upland team, got the best of it in Saturday's final as well as improving on his 1985 finish.

After earning ninth place as an individual runner at last year's CIF Finals, Hesseltine used his experience to put together a 15:41 effort to finish fifth overall, third in the team scoring. Meanwhile Burks, who had broken the school's sophomore mark with a 15:38 time at the prelims, had to settle for sixth for his 15:50 clocking.

Dan Galindo (15th, 16:08), Richardson (29th, 16:36) and Cleland (39th, 16:50) completed the scoring five for the Scots, with Bobby Charlebois (55th, 7:10) and Green (66th, 17:29) rounding out the seven Upland runners in the race.

"We felt confident we could finish third coming in. But we really wanted second place," explained Hesseltine.

"It wasn't my best race," added Burks. "I ran a better race at the prelims, and you're supposed to improve when you go to finals."

Upland's other runner turned in a good day's effort as well, as Watson's 19:12 earned her a spot in the top 10 in the girls 3A race.

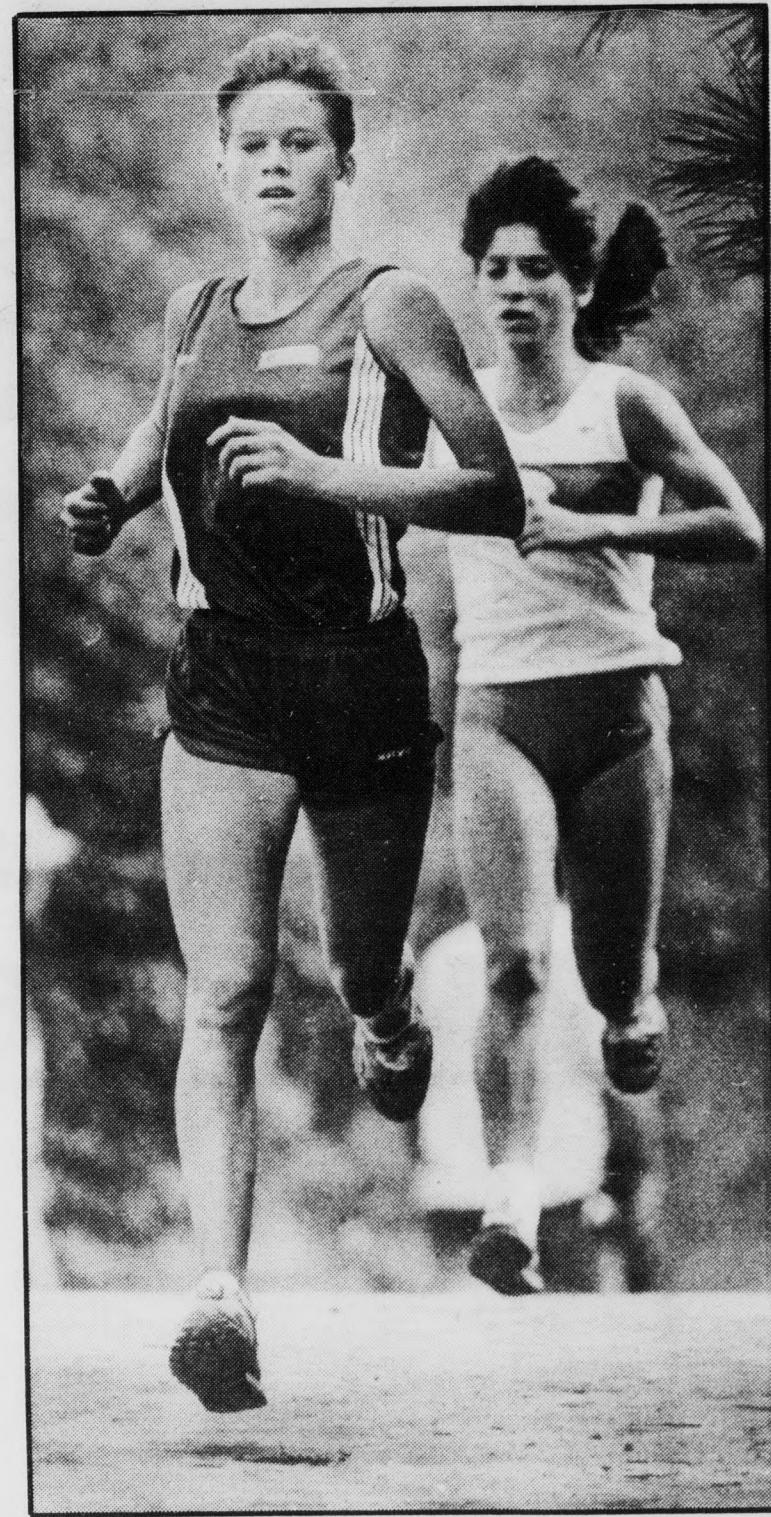

It was two weeks ago that Watson strained a thigh muscle while warming up at the Baseline League finals, making her a questionable entry for the prelims. But she answered by finishing second in her prelim heat to advance to the finals, and topped that with a big solo performance.

"She did a great job, ran very well, especially for someone who really misses not running with a team," said coach Robert Sprung.

Meanwhile the Chino girls did not rebound from an off performance in the prelims. Instead, the Cowgirls appeared unable to cope with a tough field, finishing 10th in a field of 12 teams.

"I don't know. I didn't put any pressure on them all week, just told them to go out and run their race," said coach John Aguilera.

Kim Tiffen, who lost a shoe during her prelim race the week before, kept her footwear intact to clock in at 20:20, good enough for 24th place finish. Shelly Vanderveen (32nd, 21:03), Angie Montoya (45th, 21:44), Holly Grouer (52nd, 22:03) and Rosanne Nickells (58th, 22:15) completed the scoring.

West Valley teams eye playoffs

Six West Valley football teams are making final preparations for the CIF playoffs that begin throughout the area Friday night.

Four of the six West Valley teams heading into the playoffs received home games when pairings were released at the CIF office here Sunday.

Fontana's Citrus Belt League-champion Steelers received the No. 3 seed in the Big Five Conference and will face Servite at home Friday night.

The Steelers, 9-1 on the season and unbeaten in league this year, will take on a Friar team that finished third in the Angelus League at 7-3.

Elsewhere from the West Valley, Baseline League champion Damien drew an Eastern Conference playoff opener at home against Nogales (8-2), the third-place team out of the Sierra League, while Upland will take on Northview (10-0), the No. 4 seed and champions of the Valle Vista League.

In the Southeastern Conference, Ontario, the Hacienda League's second place team, will open at home against Barstow (6-3-1), the third-place team out of the San Andreas League, while Montclair, the Hacienda's third-place team, will face No. 4 seed Baldwin Park (7-3) on the road.

Ontario Christian will open the Inland Conference playoffs at home against Western Christian (8-2), the second-place team out of the Alpha League.

On paper, the toughest row to hoe could be the one Upland has been lined up with, but Scots' head coach Pete Merandi appeared more than happy with the turnout.

"I certainly think it was a very fair draw," said Merandi, whose Scots blew Northview out in their pre-league game last year.

"They were a young team and made mistakes a young team makes," he said. "They don't do that anymore. They can't and be unbeaten. We've seen them twice this year, though, so we'll have some idea of what they're going to do."

Upland goes into the game against a seeded team on a three-game losing streak.

Alta Loma celebrates opening of cage action

Tearing a page from the University of Kentucky basketball book, Alta Loma High School's varsity boys' cage squad launched its first practice of the season at 12:01 a.m. Nov. 10 in the Braves' gym.

Tribe coach Wayne Carlson said 14 players turned out for the two-hour session, attended by some 35 parents, fans and cheerleaders. Donuts and soft drinks were served.

Carlson, starting his third season as the ALHS coach, termed the early-morning "worthwhile" and a boon to the team's comradery.

L.J. "Bud" Keeney H.O.T. Tips (House of Tools)

To form ferrules of any size on shopmade handles for files or carving tools, wrap some copper wire around and coat with solder.

If you have a lathe, it's easy to bore a centered hole in the end of a dowel. You can also do this with a drill press or radial arm saw & a scrap of wood. First clamp the scrap underneath the drill chuck and bore a hole the size of the dowel. Without disturbing the block, press the dowel into the hole. Change to the smaller bit and drill the right size hole — it's automatically centered.

When you were in desperate need of a good clamp have you tried your drill press or lathe. Just clamp the work between the quill and press table or between headstock and tailstock on the lathe (remove the centers).

State traffic deaths drop in wake of seat belt law

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Safety belts have made the difference between life and death for 5 percent of California drivers and passengers involved in accidents this year, according to statistics recently released by the California Highway Patrol.

Since a state law requiring everybody in an automobile to wear seatbelts went into effect on Jan. 1, the number of accidents has increased by almost 7 percent, but the percentage of deaths has dropped 5 percent, said Susan Cowan-Scott, CHP public information officer.

In San Bernardino County, the fatality rate of drivers and passengers of cars or light pickup trucks dropped 28 percent this year during the period of January to August, compared to the same period in 1985, according to CHP figures.

Those figures do not include deaths of motorcyclists, bicyclists, pedestrians, or bus and truck drivers and passengers, who do not wear seatbelts, Cowan-Scott said.

Although there were 1,900 more accidents in the county this year than for the same eight-month period in 1985, 19 less people died.

Comparing the new county statistics with 1984 figures is less dramatic, but still shows an improvement. Despite the increase of traffic accidents this year, the figures show a 14 percent decrease in driver and passenger deaths, compared to 1984.

Cowan-Scott said the increase in accidents in 1986 can be attributed to an increase in travel.
